ABOUT THIS FIG

College Connections

The United States is a constitutional democracy, but what does this mean? While the US Constitution declares “We, the People,” it is also a document that puts limitations on democratic rule. In Enduring Tensions, we will connect the politics of the Constitution to the historical moment of its framing and look at the ways in which the world’s oldest constitutional order shapes politics today.

Acting I

Introduces the fundamentals of acting and the world of theater. Uses improvisation and theater games to develop freedom, creativity, and confidence, culminating in the performance of a two-character scene.

Reacting to the Past

The Constitutional Convention of 1787: Constructing the American Republic brings to life the debates that most profoundly shaped American government. As representatives to the Convention, students must investigate the ideological arguments behind possible structures for a new government and create a new constitution. Reacting to the Past is an award-winning series of immersive role-playing games that actively engage students in their own learning. Students assume the roles of historical characters and practice critical thinking, primary source analysis, and argument, both written and spoken. Reacting games are flexible enough to be used across the curriculum, from first-year general education classes and discussion sections of lecture classes to capstone experiences and honors programs.

NEXT STEPS

After you're registered for your FIG, you will want to check out the Meet Your FIG page (<https://fyp.uoregon.edu/fall-2020-figs>). This page will have everything you need to know before the beginning of fall term, including how to email your FIG Assistant, if you have a summer assignment, and when you will be meeting your FIG for the first time in September. In order to prepare for your coursework and be notified about important academic deadlines you will want to download the “Canvas” and “Navigate” apps to your phone or any device you will be using. If you have questions about anything, make sure you email your FIG Assistant – they are here to help!
