ABOUT THIS FIG

College Connections

Media Mirror explores creative ways to use entertainment and information media to learn more about ourselves and others and to enrich our everyday lives. We will study how images reflect, inform and influence the ways we think and live. We will explore how you create, use and interpret external media – which include art, television, print publications and the Internet – and how those media both mirror and shape everything you think, feel and do.

Media and Society

What is the relationship between media industry and media content? How does popular culture articulate cultural beliefs and practices? How do we analyze and interpret the media industries? This course is designed to equip students with the key concepts, theories, and methods to undertake their own critical analyses of media and the industries that make them. It will examine how media emerge within specific social and historical contexts and how they participate in ideological practices with wide-reaching cultural consequences.

Mind and Society

This course is an introduction to psychological research methods, child and adult development, personality structure and functioning, social processes in every day life, cultural and cross-cultural models of human adaptation, and abnormal clinical psychology. This course is part of a two-term sequence in introductory psychology. The other course in this sequence (PSY 201) emphasizes learning, perception, memory, and the role of neural structures in psychological processes.

NEXT STEPS

After you're registered for your FIG, you will want to check out the Meet Your FIG page (<https://fyp.uoregon.edu/fall-2020-figs>). This page will have everything you need to know before the beginning of fall term, including how to email your FIG Assistant, if you have a summer assignment, and when you will be meeting your FIG for the first time in September. In order to prepare for your coursework and be notified about important academic deadlines you will want to download the "Canvas" and "Navigate" apps to your phone or any device you will be using. If you have questions about anything, make sure you email your FIG Assistant – they are here to help!
