ABOUT THIS FIG

College Connections

Education Exclusion: Race, First to go to college in your family, Sexual Orientation, Gender. Educational places are supposed to be inclusive, right? Join us in a discussion on how race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, and being the first-in-the family to go to the college affect our educational journeys. In our Runway community, we'll discuss what this all means to our scholarly identity as college students and how we develop ways for institutional change.

Education Issues & Problems

Educational Issues and Problems will provide an introduction to American education and social change. Our society faces an array of social, political, and economic challenges. Students will critically examine how we have arrived at this intricate moment in American schooling, as well as how social change has influenced schooling and vice versa. Further, multiple viewpoints are used to understand American education and all of its complexities.

Introduction to Ethnic Studies

Race structures life for people of every racial group in the U.S., and yet many people find race difficult to talk about and even more difficult to understand. Considering the centrality of race to American life, it is essential that students learn to talk about race, to understand the ways race works to privilege some and disempower others, and to access the histories, literatures, and social movements of various individuals and communities that have challenged the status quo in a racist society.

NEXT STEPS

After you're registered for your FIG, you will want to check out the Meet Your FIG page (<https://fyp.uoregon.edu/fall-2020-figs>). This page will have everything you need to know before the beginning of fall term, including how to email your FIG Assistant, if you have a summer assignment, and when you will be meeting your FIG for the first time in September. In order to prepare for your coursework and be notified about important academic deadlines you will want to download the "Canvas" and "Navigate" apps to your phone or any device you will be using. If you have questions about anything, make sure you email your FIG Assistant – they are here to help!
